

CASE STUDY

Bedelsford School ● ● ● ● ● ● ●

Dataphone supported Bedelsford School to create a telecoms solution that allows them to focus on teaching and learning.

Bedelsford School is an outstanding special school with 74 pupils in Kingston Upon Thames, Surrey. The school aims to provide innovative education and a challenging environment for pupils aged 2 to 19, who have a wide range of physical disabilities, including profound and multiple learning difficulties and complex health needs.

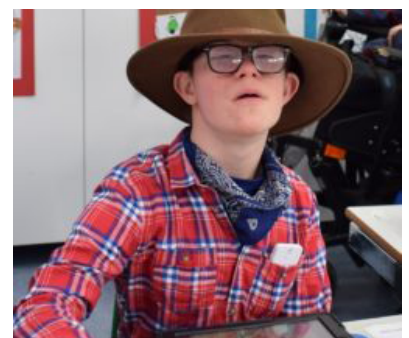

Solutions

Dataphone has been supplying its sister school (Dysart School) in Surbiton for 10 years. As education specialists, we know that it is vital for special needs schools to have phones in the classroom with a public address system.

To help the school to meet this requirement, we installed the latest NEC on premise IP solution. Our engineers also configured an external, weatherproof speaker system for the playground - ensuring that pupils and teachers could hear important messages wherever they are in the school.

Such an important part of the school's infrastructure obviously needs to be reliable, so Dataphone provided Bedelsford School with full system on-site maintenance, and a package that includes all lines and calls.

“ A better service with more facilities. ”

Why Dataphone?

Bedelsford School's Site Manager says:

"We had run out of extension lines and had no tannoy system. We needed a new system installed, and Dataphone seemed like the obvious choice as they were recommended by various other schools in the borough and could offer us a new system at a competitive price.

"We had limited infrastructure within the building to support the new system, but Dataphone was able to overcome this by installing more data cabling. Since switching to Dataphone, we have experienced a better service with more facilities within the service. We would be happy to recommend Dataphone to other schools."

Calm and welcoming

Bedelsford School's latest Ofsted report says the school is "a calm and welcoming place". We can certainly second that!

The staff were friendly and welcoming, and the installation went smoothly. We are proud to serve such a fantastic school, and to have played a small part in helping the staff at Bedelsford School to provide a "stimulating yet safe learning environment in which all pupils are supported to engage in and enjoy their learning".
